Blaze Starts With Ship, on ReturnFromHawaii,670 Miles From California

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12 .- All the boats and rafts in which they abandoned the burning steamship by the Shipping Board freighter West Faralon bound for the Dutch West Indies. The sink. She is about 1,400 miles east of Honolulu and 670 miles southwest of San Pedro.

There were 73 passengers on board, 56 were in the cabin, and 145 officers and members of the crew, and the West Faralon, said were safe.

The West Faralon was directed by wireless to stand by the City of Honolulu, which the skipper had reported was apparently doomed, until the arrival of the United States army transport Thomas, which will bring the passengers to San Francisco, permitting the West Faralon to proceed. The army transport was steaming at top speed, and was expected to reach the sene before midnight.

When reports through the Federal tiegraph and the Radio Corporation of America were pieced together they always at the fire on the City of Henolulu was discovered at a little after 5 o'clock in the morning as the deamship was heading for its home for at San Pedro, on the trip back from its first round trip in the Hawiian-California service.

Less than four hours after the fire first was found the passengers and most of the crew were ordered to take to the boats. These were lowered immediately and life rafts were called into service for those of the crew who could not be accommodated in the boats.

Orders were flashed to the West Faralon to try to get a line aboard the City of Honolulu, but the fire was too het to permit this approach without endangering the rescue ship and sibility.

Some mystery surrounds the origin of the fire, but this may be due to the meagerness of the dispatches received by radio and perhaps can be fully feared up by the officers of the City of Honolulu when they reach land.

Many of the passengers on the burned liner were from Pacific coast titles and were returning from Hapail. One of the passenger was Roy d. Crowder, general passenger agent for the line, who was making the round try on the maiden voyage of the ship in this service.

The vessel had reached a point 1,405 miles from Honolulu and 670 miles (Centinud on page five) that does not shrink from facing a large number of friendly voters and telling them they are wrong on an is sue of paramount local interest.

The people of St. Lawrence County, and particularly of Ogdensburg, are strongly in favor of the ship canal project. St. Lawrence County always has been one of the most stanchly Re-publican districts in the state, and has regularly turned in most substantial major, les for the party. In the face of this situation the Governor neither lodged nor quibbled. Nor did he pay the slightest attention to the prayers and petitions of the local leaders, who urged him to hide behind a smoke screen of generalities, or to make his appeal to the pocketbooks of the hard-working people of the district by talk-ing economy, but by all means to avoid coming to grips with the ship canal question, lest he endanger his party's supremacy in the county.

Frankly Admits Hostility "According to my information, the one place in the State of New York where there is any public opinion in favor of the St. Lawrence ship canal is here," said the Governor in opening his attack. "I therefore take advantage of this opportunity frankly to admit to the people of this locality that I have been, as strenuously as I could.

admit to the people of this locality that I have been, as strenuously as I could, opposing the propaganda for the construction of a deep sea ship canal.

"Let my adversary, when he comes here next week, as frankly state what his position is on this important subject. You are entitled to know what I have done, and my reasons for it, and then it is for you to pass upon those reasons and that course of conduct.

"Since coming here my attention has been called to an item in a local newspaper saying that I will probably be asked to explain my attitude. I don't have to be asked to explain my attitude. I am not going around the state looking for votes. I am simply presenting to the electorate an account of my stewardship, and it is for them to say whether they wish that sort of government continued or wish it changed."

have been superficial, that the plan itself is inadequate, and that the estifante of cost is insufficient. No study whatever, and, no estimate, have been made to find out how much it would cost to deepen the channels of the Great Lakes, to deepen the harbors of the Great Lakes, to build outer harbors, wherever it has been favored to establish seaports, to co-ordinate the rail-road terminal with ccean shipping, which would be necessary. Confessedly that expense, of which no study whatever has been made, would run into the hundreds of millions.

"Second, I have opposed the project thus far upon the further ground that no study has yet been made, and no proof has yet been adduced, that it would be commercially feasible to establish seaports in the Great Lakes and to divert ocean-going ships to the Great Lakes in sufficient volume to pay for the enormous expenditure required, and no study has yet been made to show that it is commercially feasible, regardless of the expense, to build up the agencies necessary to handle world shipping for a waterway which necesshipping for a waterway which neces-sarily must be closed at least five months in the year, requiring a du-(Continued on page three)
